

Our business is changing. Rapidly. We've been through a lot of change here. And there's more ahead.

Being on the forefront of the change is a challenge, to say the least. There are so many facets to our re-build. And while it looks big on the inside, there are exponentially more moving parts outside of our building when it comes to reaching a rapidly changing demand for information. And those businesses and platforms also need and are looking for change.

Since I can't work inside and outside, I'm moving to try something new. Is it the best timing? Probably not. Is it the right time? Yes.